

Status of Engineers Is Topic Discussed at Meeting on Thursday

After County Chapter of New York State Society of Professional Engineers held a very interesting meeting at the Hotel Hamilton on Thursday evening, with a good attendance, especially when the condition of the weather is taken into consideration.

G. Wallace Codwise, president of the chapter, presided at the meeting and introduced several guests, including Oscar A. D'Alonzo, J. A. Clark and William Schermerhorn of Poughkeepsie, members of the Dutchess County Chapter, of which Mr. D'Alonzo is president and R. F. Wilcoxson of the U. S. Geological Service.

The only business taken up, following the excellent business dinner served in the grill room of the hotel, was action on a suggestion made by President Codwise that a joint meeting of the societies of Ulster and adjoining counties, including Dutchess, Rockland and Orange be held, perhaps during the latter part of July. On motion Mr. Codwise was authorized to take steps towards bringing about such a meeting and to represent the Ulster county society in making arrangements.

The engineers had the honor of having with them for the evening Arnold C. Chapman, president of the New York State Society and chief engineer of the 340-acre development of the port of Albany.

Mr. Chapman said that he had been to understand that the society was already provided with a "good speaker" for the evening and had not come prepared to make an address. Notwithstanding which he proceeded to give a very interesting talk on the status of the engineering profession and the long fight which has been waged by the engineers to obtain proper recognition.

In beginning what he called "just a plain, honest to goodness talk," Mr. Chapman referred to the days of the constitutional convention at Albany in 1915, when he and other members of the Albany society tried to get members of the convention to take a deeper interest in the work of the engineers and especially to provide that technical work such as that of the highway department should be headed by a competent engineer. There were but a few scattered societies of engineers in those days and the effort was unsuccessful. Later during the time of Alfred E. Smith as governor attempts were again made to get action along the same lines. It is only within recent years that there has been improvement in the situation, which has come along with the law providing for the licensing of engineers. Today, said Mr. Chapman, the state society has chapters in most of the thickly settled portions of the state and they are showing enthusiasm in building up their organizations. "An enthusiasm," said the speaker, "that should have been shown 25 years ago."

Engineers Sit Back.
Mr. Chapman said that the engineers have never in the past worked together for the common good, either of the profession or the community and he asked, "how many engineers have been recognized as leaders in the community?" He said that the role of the engineer has been to sit in a back room somewhere, analyze conditions, form conclusions and make plans and then have some silver-tongued orator appear before the public and take the glory.

The present society, which is an outgrowth of the licensing law, was organized, said the speaker, not so much for technical problems, or to bring out new theories as to bring out the social, community and public welfare side of the profession. But, he added, it will take years to put the profession where it belongs. Twenty-two states now have licensing laws, said Mr. Chapman and one effect has been that in many cases subterfuges of all kinds are being used to avoid employing competent engineers. He told of one case, as an example, where a community had hired a man to map sewer and water systems who had last been employed as a milk inspector.

The speaker declared that no class plays a more important part in the world's work than the engineers and their standing as professional men should have far more recognition than it has yet achieved. Said he, the lawyer and the doctor is recognized as a professional man and is paid for what he knows; the tendency is to pay the engineer for what he does, what can be perceived. He warned the members of the society that they should have farthest from their minds the thought of "setting up a little kingdom," but should aim toward the protection of life, health, property and the promotion of public welfare.

Added During Depression
Mr. Chapman called attention to the work that engineers have done during the period of depression and said that during the past few months he had recognized as outstanding in the profession have been working and advising with the administration at Washington, without remuneration and that many of the projects embraced under the industrial recovery act will depend largely upon the work and training of engineers.

The speaker closed with an expression of pleasure at the interest that was being shown locally and urged the members of the Ulster county

Little Relief from Rain on Thursday

"Big drops soon stop" is an old saying that was proven true again when an electrical storm broke over Kingston during the early hours of Thursday evening. The first rain to fall came spitting down in big drops and increased in volume as the storm continued, but unfortunately the rain only fell for a brief period and was accompanied by heavy thunder and vivid lightning.

The rainfall cooled the atmosphere somewhat, but it was not long after rain ceased falling that the weather became as hot as ever, and another uncomfortable night was spent by residents here.

This morning when residents awoke after spending a restless night owing to the extreme heat it was to find the skies again overcast and indications pointing to the fact that more rain was due, but hopes were blasted as the morning hours passed without rain falling and soon the sun peeked from behind the clouds. The morning was extremely warm and muggy due to the humidity in the air.

The weather man has promised showers again, but it will need several days of steady rain to restore the burned lawns and gardens in the city. The earth is parched and dry from the long continued drouth, and the ground is baked hard as anyone who attempts to spade up the ground is aware.

This evening there will be low water pressure from 5 o'clock on until repairs are made to the city water system at Sewkill where a leak in the big main has developed. Residents are requested to refrain from the use of hose this evening as it would further reduce the pressure.

2,000,000 Persons Expected for Fourth

Heat and Holiday Expected to Provide Incentive For Huge Crowds to Vacate City For Cool Mountains.

The combination of excessive heat and a four-day holiday is expected to bring out at least 2,000,000 of New York city's population over the 4th of July holiday according to a survey made among transportation lines in the metropolis. Boarding houses in the Catskills are anticipating a busy holiday season and plans are being made to handle a heavy traffic over the week-end.

A survey made among bus, railroad and air lines in New York indicates that traffic will be much heavier this year than last year. Bus companies and railroad lines have pressed every possible vehicle into service to handle the crowds according to transportation officials. Figures given out by the Central indicated that 13,000 cars would be required to handle the crowds this year against 9,100 last year. This increased travel either indicates better times and more money to spend or perhaps one final fling by the traveling public before the final crash. Transportation men believe it is an indication of the return of better times.

Mattern Rescue Expedition Off

New York, June 30 (AP).—The "Jimmie Mattern Rescue Expedition" sailed away from Floyd Bennett Field at 7:05 a. m. eastern standard time today for Alaska.

Chief Pilot William Alexander, in command of the rescue plane, said that on reaching home he and his three companions would "divide the map into squares" and search systematically for the lost flier.

Mattern, a San Angelo, Texas, man who was attempting a flight around the world, took off from Khabarovsk, Siberia, more than two weeks ago and vanished.

The rescue plane is a large craft in which Clyde Pangborn and Hugh Herndon, Jr., once flew around the world. It is not owned by a Brooklyn brewer and bears the number "NC 403E."

With Alexander went Fred Ferman, mechanic who put Mattern's plane in shape for the flight; Harold Persons and Thomas Abbey, motorcycle cop who obtained a furlough to help with the search.

Maloney Sentenced To Term of 8-16 Years

New York, June 30 (AP).—Edward D. Maloney, 33, former State Trooper, and prohibition agent convicted last Monday of manslaughter in the first degree in the killing of Larry Fay, former night club owner, today was sentenced to a term of eight to sixteen years in Sing Sing prison.

Five years of the sentence, which was imposed by Judge Cornelius F. Collins, was for possession of the revolver with which Fay was killed. Before sentence was imposed, Dudley Field Malone, counsel for Maloney, pointed out to Judge Collins that the jury had recommended mercy. He told the court Maloney had a splendid and useful past and a fine record in the World War.

Maloney said he came to New York city from Syracuse in 1925.

Government Starts New Fiscal Year on Saturday With Cuts

Aim of Roosevelt Government is to Spend Billion Dollars Less in New Financial Year—Expect to Do It.

Washington, June 30 (AP).—Uncle Sam sets out on a new fiscal year tomorrow with a payroll shortened by the elimination of thousands of men and women.

Even in foreign countries where there are American agencies will the pinch of economy be felt, for the Democratic platform promise of a 25 per cent cut in Federal expenditures has been carried abroad, too.

The aim is to spend a billion dollars less in the new financial year for regular running expenses. Administration officials say they will hit the mark.

In the old-established departments and independent offices, no opportunities have been neglected, the bosses say, to save every nickel possible. But the "save-the-nickel" try does not apply to the emergency agencies set up to combat the depression. In these, the only limit is prospective needs.

First to be hard hit is, naturally, personnel. There is the 15 per cent wage cut, already in effect three months. Then, hundreds of dismissals are being effected, while in other hundreds of cases the workers, though retained, will suffer additional pay cuts by imposition of furloughs.

Among those persons being dropped are employees of 30 years or more service, who have been made eligible for pensions, men or women whose husbands also hold government jobs, and that great class whose services are no longer deemed necessary because their work has been terminated or curtailed.

SMALL HOME OWNERS WANT SPECIAL SESSION

Albany, N. Y., June 30 (AP).—The plea of small home owners today was added to the mounting list of requests for a special session of the New York legislature.

The home owners' request was contained in a petition submitted to Governor Lehman yesterday by the "Home and Small Property Owners Defense League of State Island." Governor Lehman took the petition under advisement after telling the committee "it might be well to wait and see to what extent the federal home loan act may bring relief." The petitioners said that they expect very little aid under this measure.

"It makes provisions to obtain aid," they said, "provided we can pay interest, provided we can amortize the principal of our mortgage and pay taxes and assessments, but it makes no provision to help us keep and remain in our homes should we not possess the wherewithal to meet any new obligations the lending institutions may, because of the benefits derived from them from this act, grant us."

ENDS 44 YEARS OF SERVICE AT ONEONTA NORMAL SCHOOL

Oneonta, N. Y., June 30 (AP).—Dr. Percy I. Bugbee today ended 44 years of service as a teacher at the State Normal School here. For the past 35 of his 75 years Doctor Bugbee has been president of the school. Last February he tendered his resignation to become effective today. The educator said he had reached an age when he thought he should retire from active teaching.

Doctor Bugbee came to the school in 1889 as a teacher of mathematics. He was 31 and not many years out of St. Lawrence University from which he was graduated in 1879. After nine years Doctor Bugbee was made president of the normal.

Doctor Bugbee is a former president of the Council of Normal School Principals, and for more than 20 years has been a member of the Oneonta Board of Education.

BLACK WILL OPPOSE O'BRIEN IN PRIMARIES

New York, June 30 (AP).—New York's mayoralty campaign, opened yesterday with Mayor John P. O'Brien's announcement that he would seek re-election, was given impetus today when Representative Loring M. Black of Brooklyn announced he would enter the primaries in opposition to the mayor.

In his announcement, Representative Black asserted there was widespread dissatisfaction with Mayor O'Brien and that the Democratic party cannot win with him.

"Mayor O'Brien is the leaders' choice, but not the party's," Black's statement said.

Will Draft Code

Lake George, N. Y., June 30 (AP).—America's federal directors will draft a code of fair trade practices as regional meetings in New York, Atlanta, Chicago, Kansas City and San Francisco on July 20 to comply with the National Recovery Act, according to John W. Macdonald of Rochester, president of the National Federal Directors Association.

Treasury Receipts.
Washington, June 30 (AP).—Treasury receipts for June 29 were $56,945,136.30; expenditures $113,497,925.93; balance $59,340,361.15. Custom duties for 25 days of June, $25,431,234.44.

President Returns to Boyhood Playground

Campanella Island N. B., June 30 (AP).—President Roosevelt was content to just loaf and eat today on his boyhood summer playground after one of the most adventuresome trips ever made by a chief executive of the United States.

Figuring down a hillside for Mr. Roosevelt called for the assistance of his some ladies yesterday afternoon after a contest with the elements and delivered to his neighbors of Canada a message for the struggling Geneva disarmament conference.

"I was glad I had with me the American chairman to the Geneva disarmament conference, Norman H. Davis. Now we will go back and tell them we had seen with his own eyes what a border without fortification means between two great nations."

There were inquiries here awaiting the seagoing president about the Geneva disarmament conference but he just smiled and said he had heard nothing about reports of a new crisis over there, on the question which the Europeans have been pressing—stabilization of the currency. Very obviously he wants other things done at London before that is undertaken.

So, today President Roosevelt relaxed and talked with his family. They were all here—the sons, excepting Elliott, but including his wife, and the daughter-in-law, Mrs. Roosevelt and the two boys, Franklin Jr. and John. Tomorrow he plans to leave aboard the waiting cruise ship Indianapolis for Washington. It has been 13 years since Franklin D. Roosevelt came here. On the last occasion he was stricken with an attack of infantile paralysis.

Payments End for 400,000 Veterans

Washington, June 30 (AP).—Upward of 400,000 veterans were on notice today that midnight means an end to payments to them from the government.

Veterans administration officials, meanwhile, pushed along plans for early reviews of thousands of veterans to determine disposition of their cases.

Under the economy law and subsequent modifying regulations and statutes approximately 357,000 World War soldiers receiving disability allowances for troubles not directly connected with their service go off the rolls at 12 sharp tonight for an estimated savings of $83,000,000.

Administration officials said there were several thousand others for whom payments would stop tonight, but the total was not available.

Latest official figures showed the economy campaign would cut fiscal year 1934 expenditures for the fiscal year 1933 $245,000,000 under appropriations for the 1933 period, with the major reductions broken down as follows:

Disability compensation for troubles attributed to service, cut from $203,659,189 to $118,272,240. In this classification are approximately 150,000 veterans of the so-called "presumptive" type, whose disabilities under previous laws were presumed to have originated in service.

New Windsor Boy Killed; Others Hurt

Michael Nee, Jr., 16-year-old son of Town Clerk Michael Nee and Mrs. Catherine Nee of New Windsor, was instantly killed about 4 a. m. Thursday when an automobile in which he was riding left the road on Route 17, while descending Denton Hill, near the New Hampton intersection, crashed into a telegraph pole and turned over three times.

Lillian Lease, 15, of 57 Van Ness street, Newburgh, another passenger in the car, is in Horton Memorial Hospital, Middletown, with a fractured right ankle. John Sibodda, 19, of 4 Johns street, New Windsor, driver of the car, Frank Medrick, 16, of 2 Johns street, Newburgh, and John Meahan, 15, of 244 First street, Newburgh, were slightly injured, and, after treatment in the hospital, are expected to be discharged today.

Both Sibodda and Meahan graduated from the Newburgh Academy on Wednesday night. Young Nee was a member of Academy sophomore class.

MAURICE BAKER WAS ADMITTED TO THE BAR

Maurice A. Baker of this city was admitted to the practice of law Thursday in the appellate division of the supreme court when Justice F. Walter Bliss addressed 17 law students who had been admitted to the bar. Words from the autobiography of Calvin Coolidge were quoted by Judge Bliss to the 17 newly admitted members of the bar. They were to effect that lawyers usually lose cases through mistaken facts rather than ignorance of the law. "Know your facts, for if you know your facts the law will take care of itself," Judge Bliss admonished. He also urged the 17 men and one woman who had just been sworn in as members of the bar by John Herrick, clerk of the court, to participate in the affairs of their home community.

President Boards U. S. Navy Cruiser

Washington, June 30 (AP).—Secretary Swanson today received a wireless report that President Roosevelt and his party were aboard the cruiser Indianapolis to start the President's trip back to the White House.

The report from Captain John M. Sledge stated simply that the presidential party had come aboard at 1:55 a. m. The message came from Campanella Island, New Brunswick.

The party's last orders to the Indianapolis were issued with the understanding it would carry the president to the mouth of the Potomac.

Officials explained, however, that the president was commander-in-chief of the navy and the ship would not on his command as long as he was aboard.

Milk Control Plan Will Not Be Needed Because of Drouth

Plan of The Federal Government to Washington Have Also Induced State Board to Delay The Proposed Plan For Control.

Albany, N. Y., June 30 (AP).—The drouth in dairylands which in some counties was described as a "crisis," and the plans of the federal administration in Washington have induced the state milk control board to delay until "some future time" the proposed plan for control of milk production. Chairman Charles H. Baldwin said today.

Pastures have been burned brown by the sun six weeks ahead of time, wells and streams have dried up, and oat crops are "heading out" so close to the ground that they cannot be harvested and fed to cattle. The milk board has learned. The drouth was described as particularly severe in Herkimer, Oneida, Chenango and Broome counties, where farmers are feeding hay to their cattle twice a day and hauling water from ditches.

"Conditions in some parts of the state are terrible," Baldwin said. "Milk production is starting to fall off heavily in many places, just as the summer season, with its heavy demand for milk and milk products is setting in."

This situation, the chairman said, will tend to limit milk production naturally, and a control plan will not be needed.

Another factor which has induced the board to delay its control plan, he said, is the fact that the federal government apparently has no intention to inaugurate a process tax on milk products.

"We have prepared our plan with the understanding that the federal government would want to see some such control in every state," the chairman said. "But when representatives of the board went to the milk conference at Washington early this week they found the government apparently has no plans for a process tax, and views at Washington are divided over the production control proposals."

The New York state plan, which the board was ready to put into effect on short notice, is for penalizing farmers who produce more than a given quota, and distributing the money thus collected among farmers who observed the rule. The board originally was informed that some such plan was necessary in any state which wished to benefit under a federal process tax.

"We are continuing to work on the plan," Mr. Baldwin said, "with the idea of putting it into effect at some future time." He pointed out that the delay is advantageous to farmers inasmuch as they will be given an opportunity to plan their production well in advance.

NO OFFICIAL REPORT OF THREATENED MILK STRIKE

Albany, N. Y., June 30 (AP).—Director Kenneth F. Fee of the State Milk Control Board said today that the board has received no official report of a threatened strike of dairymen in Kirkwood, Broome county. Dairymen there are said to be planning a strike next Thursday because of dissatisfaction with prices paid producers for their May milk and because milk from other states is being sold in their market.

"We are controlling the sale of milk from other states in New York through our licensing power over dealers," Director Fee said. "If dealers buy from farmers in other states, they must pay the farmers the same minimum prices, fixed by the board, that they would pay if they were buying their milk from New York state farmers."

Fee said that the board hoped to get still better prices for the dairymen for their June milk than were paid for the May milk.

"The May prices covered only half the month," Fee said, "and even so they were higher than the April prices for the first time. In previous years the May prices have been lower than the April prices."

Maurice A. Baker of this city was admitted to the practice of law Thursday in the appellate division of the supreme court when Justice F. Walter Bliss addressed 17 law students who had been admitted to the bar. Words from the autobiography of Calvin Coolidge were quoted by Judge Bliss to the 17 newly admitted members of the bar. Kahn Relates $5,000,000 Profit In Pennroad Deal

Head of Kuhn, Loeb & Company Tells Senate Investigators His Firm Received Huge Sum for Financing Pennroad Corporation—Pecora Says Investors in Pennroad Had Lost More Than $100,000,000.

Washington, June 30 (AP).—Otto H. Kahn told Senate investigators today the total profit to his firm, Kuhn, Loeb & Company, from financing the Pennroad Corporation was more than $5,000,000.

A balance sheet as of December 31, 1931, showed total assets of $66,974,815 and deposits of $15,210,245.

A previous balance sheet, as of the end of 1930, had shown assets of $66,974,815 and deposits of $29,115,915.

A sharp shrinkage in cash also was shown during 1932, from $16,295,242 to $3,600,996.

Pecora said investors in the Pennroad Corporation had lost more than $100,000,000.

Kahn agreed that would be true if all the stock sold was held to the present day, when it is selling around 3 1/2 and 4.

Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, questioned Kahn about formation of the Pennroad corporation. Pecora put in the record the agreement under which the Pennroad Corporation sold 5,800,000 shares, most of it going to Pennsylvania Railroad stockholders at $15 a share.

Kuhn, Loeb & Company purchased 217,000 at the same price and under a separate agreement was given options for four blocks of 125,000 each at $16, $17, $18 and $19 a share, respectively.

"That was our compensation for work done and advice given," Kahn said, regarding the purchase of the latter.

In organizing the Pennroad Corporation, Kahn said his firm advised that it be undertaken "without any fixed charge" or issuance of preferred stock, and that it offer nothing but equity or common stock, as the "result depended entirely on the future."

Kahn testified the advice "turned out to be sound" and the "best ever given."

He added that to have underwritten the Pennroad Railroad issue would have been too burdensome a charge on the corporation.

Berlin, June 30 (AP).—Protestant churchmen in Prussia must choose next Sunday between dictates of conscience and dictates of an increasingly Nazi government.

If they choose one, they will approve the Nazis' wish for dominance of all walks of life including religion. If they choose the other, they will be liable for prosecution.

Their own leaders have asked that Sunday be a day of prayer of supplication for freedom to conduct their religious life as they desire.

But Nazi commissioners have ordered that the day be one of thanksgiving in which pastors and elders shall thank God that the Hitlerites control theoretically the churches as they do the industrial, political and commercial life of the Reich.

The Nazis have ordered further that flags be flown at the churches, the black, white and red of old and the new Germany, and the swastika emblem under which the Hitlerites have grown in power.

Those Protestants who have rallied behind the Rev. Friedrich Von Bodelschwingh as the new Reichsbishop, in the face of strong Nazi opposition feel the Hitlerites orders challenge the freedom of conscience.

Azil Checks Wild-Cat Trips to Wilderness

By PAUL SANDERS.

Rio De Janeiro (AP)—Expeditions into the Brazilian hinterland will be confined hereafter to legitimate scientific expeditions accompanied by government officials, under a decree designed to prevent further exploitation in mining and forestry.

Brazilian authorities and newspapers have been irked by adverse publicity arising from small and ill-equipped expeditions which, with negative results, have sought Col. M. P. Fawcett, English scientist, missing more than eight years in Mato Grosso.

Madness Case Cited.

Arrest of Tom Roche, gold hunter and explorer, who claimed knowledge of the whereabouts of Paul Redfern, American aviator missing since 1927, and the subsequent suicide of Edward Redfern, Paul's uncle, gave the government further reason for checking down on expeditions. No substantiation of the Redfern-in-Brazil theory was found. Neither has word been received from a small expedition which set out in April, 1932, to look for Fawcett. This expedition was headed by Stephen Hutton, gold hunter, who claimed to have found Fawcett in an isolated region.

Government Takes Control.

Hereafter expeditions, after proving that they have adequate financial resources and genuine scientific or humanitarian aims, must receive special permission from the foreign ministry before entering Brazil.

Once here, they must report to the ministry of agriculture, which will assign an inspector to the expedition.

Embargo on Specimens.

The decree further requires collection of new animal, plant, or mineral specimens to Brazilian museums. Only duplicate specimens may be exported.

The government feels it has a lengthy list of "adventurers" and "specimens" to deal with. It frequently has obtained material abroad under false pretenses, and antagonized Indian tribes, and have peddled fantastic tales.

TWO-CENT SAVINGS PLAN HELPS AUSTRALIAN ROADS

Two cents per man a day means a saving of more than $180,000 a year.

Prayer For Rain.

Onawa, O.—The Rev. V. H. Krull, pastor of the First Lutheran church, led a prayer for rain and for the welfare of the people and animals from the extreme heat before the congregation of St. Peter's and St. Paul's Roman Catholic Church.

The next day rain fell and the temperature dropped from 100 degrees to 80.

Too Hot For Cupid.

Minneapolis—Cupid doesn't thrive in the heat—at least not in Minneapolis, thinks George Hemperly, clerk of the district court.

Ordinarily Clerk Hemperly issued 10 to 30 marriage licenses a day during June. The average during the three weeks heat wave has fallen to less than half of that.

Changes Her Mind.

Chicago—After describing her husband in a divorce action as mean, spiteful, disagreeable, temperamental, selfish, uncivil, cool, bitter, brazen, and jealous, Mrs. Mae E. Stone withdrew her suit against him.

Real Philanthropist Dies.

Oklahoma City—A small group of river bottom dwellers gathered at a funeral home yesterday to pay homage to O. A. Olson, their neighbor, who made $15,000 from oil and still lived in a two-room shack.

His friends lived on his land without paying rent and he loaned money to the poor without expecting it back.

SURGERY'S HUNDRED YEARS

What the past century has witnessed in the development of surgery and what the future may bring were the subjects of an address in Chicago recently delivered by Dr. George W. Crile, famous surgeon, before the American Association for the Advancement of Science. One hundred years ago surgery was in the "stone age" of its history. It was the art of a swordsman rather than a scientist.

Surgery then had to be done without anesthesia or antiseptics. It was even without exact science, depending on the surgeon's manual skill and his quick intuition. Since then have come anesthesia, methods of antiseptics and asepsis, prevention and treatment of surgical shock, formerly the cause of many deaths, and treatment of hemorrhage and shock by blood transfusion. Today surgery corrects many natural defects, such as web feet and harelip. It has been made nearly painless. It deals with "every organ and every tissue of the body, even of the brain."

With this tremendous progress in mind, the great surgeon foresees "a century of fewer operations—for biochemistry and biophysics will tend to supplant the scalpel." He sees present-day theories giving way to mathematical equations. He sees diseases now baffling humanity understood and—be hopes—prevented and cured. It is a fascinating, inspiring and reassuring vision. Some progress seems dubious and futile, but not this progress in mastering disease.

WAGES AFFECT VALUES

A discussion of minimum wage scales now being worked out under the industrial recovery legislation brings forth the estimate that while a basic industrial wage of $12 a week seems incredibly low, it is more than the average worker in this country is now making. So much for the "American scale of living." Mere mention of the fact suggests that the hoped scale will have to be jerked up. Here is as good an argument as any for the purposed inflation now under way.

Another important application not so obvious is suggested by a thoughtful newspaper economist. It relates to real estate values. He figures that $12 a week as average industrial income would mean a monthly rental of $15 to $20 in industrial residence districts. That in turn would make a single house and its land worth not more than $2,000. If the house itself were worth $2,000, which is not a high estimate in this country, the land would be worth nothing.

He adds that if things had continued going to pieces as they were last winter, most of the land in large cities would have had no value in another year. Wages, which make buying power, make property values. Owners of houses and lands who try to hold wages down are as short-sighted as merchants who do likewise.

CHICAGO INSPIRATION

A special medal of honor may yet have to be struck for the Chicago Fair to express national gratitude for the stimulus it is giving many industries. It is said that not in many years has there been such a railroad passenger movement as that going to Chicago. One railroad broke all its records on a recent week-end when a single train, running in 15 sections, hauled 2,584 passengers to the fair. Pullman cars long idle are being returned to active service. Private automobiles, motor buses, boats and airplanes are all carrying human beings Fair-wards, too, so that the railroads are not the only transportation group benefited.

On the spiritual side the Fair seems to be doing good of another sort. A newspaper story—not in Chicago—tells of citizens coming home from the Fair all cheered up about their own and the country's outlook. Seeing what Chicagoans accomplished in spite of the depression gives others new courage and hope. There may be persons here and there who cannot forget Chicago's early successes. Its boasting and apparent selfishness. Right now, however, most of the country wishes and respects Chicago and its citizens.

MITCHELL'S INNOCENCE

The acquittal of Charles E. Mitchell of New York on the charge of defrauding the government may or may not be a "miscarriage of justice," according to the way you look at it. His procedure may or may not be "stained with fraud," by the same classic rule of judgment. It can be pointed out in mitigation of Mitchell's conduct that he had actually suffered extensive losses, and that he tried to save the business interests he represented, and their stockholders' money, apparently at personal sacrifice. It can be argued that the process was technically legal. It may even be argued that morally the professed purpose justified the means. Nevertheless the case leaves a bad taste in the mouth of the public. It arouses resentment against the wealthy who resort to such borderline processes of tax-evasion, seldom used by citizens of small income. It arouses resentment against the lawyers who make overbearing fealty legal for such clients. It arouses resentment against the laws and the courts. Such "sales," recorded merely to "establish losses" which can be deducted from payable income tax, are at best a legal sham, setting a pernicious example and threatening to breed an epidemic of tax-dodging.

REMOVING DISCONTENT

In these days of machinery most of us, as we remember the days when almost all labour was done by hand, are apt to rejoice that man can now direct machinery and thus avoid the hard muscular work of former days.

Naturally as man cannot be so tired as in those days, and has a working day really two or three hours less than before the machine age, one would expect to find him happier because of this extra leisure time.

But man is really not happier in this machine type of work, because he does the same thing every day, every hour of the day, and perhaps every minute; in fact he is almost like the machine itself, doing the same thing all the time. I'm speaking of course of times when the population as a whole is working.

And not only the working man, but the professional man also, is getting so much of his work done in the laboratory by such definite methods, that there is not the same thought being given to individual cases or problems.

It is this very sameness, this daily routine, that is making so many people discontented.

What is really needed to keep us happy and contented even when there is plenty of work for everybody?

I have before quoted Dr. Warthin's definition of what work should really be.

1. Work should be a daily adventure: going out each day to tackle something different, something that should give you a thrill.

2. Your work should need something of your brain in it; some serious thinking and planning.

3. Your work should be such that when it is done it is of a constructive or useful nature: of use to your fellow man.

4. Your work should help you mingle daily with other workers, and should train you to get along with them without the slightest trouble.

In other words the cause of discontentedness is that so much is done for us by elevators, automobiles, radio, and other machines. This takes the adventure, the planning, and the "constructiveness" out of our daily life.

What is the suggestion?

That if our work is simply a daily routine, then some hobby, some different line of endeavor, some special reading, some special work that is helping the other fellow, might reasonably be expected to remove "discontent," and make life really worth living.

STORY: George Boyard has been taken from New York to rural England, and is now a member of the London society to which he belongs. He is now a member of the London society to which he belongs. He is now a member of the London society to which he belongs.

Chapter 29 THE MEETING

ONE night when they were sitting in the hotel restaurant instead of going out as they usually did, George and Bernie sat at a table. George was looking at Bernie. Bernie was looking at George. They were both looking at each other. They were both looking at each other.

"George—what are you staring at?" Evelyn asked, but almost at once she saw for herself.

"Bernie Boyd! Well, now you see!"

"See what?" George asked. "The attention she gets." Evelyn said rather tartly. "That tall man with her is Lord Silbury. The other I suppose is her husband. Why men will run after common women is more than I can understand. Women never run after common men. They are far too sensitive."

There was a flush of excitement in her cheeks, and her eyes looked darker than usual.

"I suppose she thinks that it is my place to go and speak to her," Evelyn said. "Everything is upside down nowadays. But very probably I shall go and speak to her. I should like to meet Lord Silbury. You're not eating anything, George."

"I'm not hungry," George said. "George looked at the two men who were with Bernie. Lord Silbury was tall, and thin; "Hungry looking," George thought, he reminded her of one of the Peers in "Iolanthe," of which she had seen an amateur performance. Mrs. Spears had been in the chorus, and she had given George a ticket on the second and most unsuccessful night.

The other man who Evelyn had vaguely supposed to be Nicholas was young and fair, and effeminate, with a waist to his coat and hair too carefully marcelled.

"If you've finished, Bishop, we may as well go to the lounge," Evelyn said.

And it was in the lounge, over coffee and liqueurs that George was introduced to Bernie.

"My daughter George, she's a film fan, Miss Boyd. She knew all about you directly I mentioned your name."

Bernie turned starchy, black-lashed eyes on George.

"How sweet," she said; she smiled at the girl and sat down beside her, but she still talked to the men, seeming to single Bishop out for special attention.

GEORGIE watched her with a feeling of unreality. She was so fair and small, like a doll.

Of course Nicholas must love her. Men always liked that type of girl much better than anyone dark and brown-skinned like herself.

A long mirror on the wall opposite reflected the little group they made, and George studied it with sombre eyes.

She was wearing a brown frock tonight which made her look even darker and more elfin-like.

Evelyn had said it was a clever touch when the dressmaker (who called herself Irene, with an accent on the second syllable), had suggested brown.

"If you are sunbaked, you might as well make use of it instead of trying to hide it," she told George. "You're a brunette and can never be anything else, so we must make the most of it."

But tonight George hated herself; hated her dark eyes, and her thick wavy hair, and longed to be fair, and all pink and white like the girl beside her.

Even Bishop looked at Bernie ad-

A GOLD BEATER CAN POUND A FULL MINUTE LIFTING HIS HAMMER ONLY ONCE...

SHAPUR II. of Persia, WAS CROWNED KING BEFORE HE WAS BORN!

DR. G. H. LA BERGE - golfer in Stockton, Cal., AND HIS BROTHER in LA GRANGE, Ill., SCORED ACES ON THE 8TH HOLE ON THE SAME DAY!

July 1928

Crowned king of the Persians even before he was born, King Shapur II, who ruled from 310 to 379, was one of the greatest Persian rulers of the dynasty. He had three older brothers, when his father, King Hormizd II, died, the Persian magnates killed one, blinded another and imprisoned the third. The throne was reserved for the unborn child of one of Hormizd's wives. This child was named Shapur, and declared king of the Persians even before he was born. The country was ruled by his mother and the magnates until young Shapur became of age, at which time he took the country over and led many successful conquests against neighboring nations. During his reign the collection of the Avesta, sacred writings of the Zoroastrian religion, was completed. Shapur's small military power defeated Constantius II in the field repeatedly, but was unable to successfully occupy his conquered lands. Strange as it seems, the gold beater need only lift his heavy hammer once to pound for a full minute on the skin covered blows he reduces to microscopic thickness. The hammer rebounds off the gold each time it strikes, and the only power the applied by the gold beater is the Zoroastrian religion, was completed. Shapur's small military power defeated Constantius II in the field repeatedly, but was unable to successfully occupy his conquered lands.

chapter to make an effort to enroll every licensed engineer.

President Codriss thanked Mr. Chapman for his very interesting talk and in reference to the matter of membership stated that the state society had given the Ulster county chapter permission to enroll engineers from Sullivan, Greene and Schoharie counties.

The meeting was brought to a most pleasing conclusion with the exhibition of several rolls of motion pictures. The first part was a complete description of the work of making surveys and maps, to the finished product, of the U. S. Geological Survey. The concluding reels were thrilling scenes taken by the expedition from the Geological Survey that in 1923 made a 450 mile survey of the Colorado River, braving the rapids and other perils and dangers of the Grand Canyon.

The pictures were shown through the courtesy of Mr. Wilkinson, who loaned the reels for the occasion. Henry Millington, Jr., bringing his machine and acting as operator for the occasion.

Song His Own Funeral Hymn
The temperament of an artist followed even the death of William Faxon, a choir singer, says the Philadelphia Public Ledger. As his funeral service concluded, the voice of the deceased man chanting his favorite hymn came from behind a screen of flowers and palms. It was a photograph playing the anthem he had recorded some time before he died.

Bridal Veils in Versatile Mood

By CHERRIE NICHOLAS

OF COURSE every bride is supposed to look her loveliest at her own wedding. Which is a perfectly good reason why the right choice of the right veil and headpiece is so vastly important, for they can make or mar the picture.

The fact that designers, when it comes to bridal veils, are in a particularly dare-to-be-original mood this season is a good omen. It means that modern brides are being veiled to type rather than following prescribed rules.

The group pictured shows how very versatile present-day brides are being veiled. The exquisite ensemble on the seated figure at the top bespeaks a recent gesture among designers toward crowning the bride with little beauteous fantasies which depart from the regulation fitted lace or tulle cap versions. The circular flare of tulle about the face and at the back is perfectly charming. The lace-bordered three-quarter veil with its rounded silhouette is an innovation.

Not only are these beauteous arrangements in vogue, but some of the most fashionable brides of the season are wearing the most ravishing little hats of tulle with rickshaws, little hats of tulle, a wreathlet of orange blossoms encircling the shallow crown, the veil draped with consummate art to fall over the shoulders en train.

Then, too, in tune with this new theme of tulle hats with a brim, little "sets" are offered at smart shops, which cater to brides, which include enchanting flower toques, either of roses and petals or of orange blossoms and buds, with muffs made of the same, the newest idea being for the muffs to be heart-shaped. The voluminous veil is worked to fall in graceful billowy masses over this flower headpiece and the long train of the gown. The inspiring thought about these lovely flower ensembles is that one need not take the responsibility and burden of working out these beguiling fantasies at home, for they are available at most any milliner shop or stores which make a specialty of outfitting brides with veils and headpieces. Flower hats and muffs in different colors for the bridesmaids complete the picture.

The alluring fitted lace cap and lace-trimmed veil posed on the seated figure below in the picture is just such as brides-to-be dream of when they plan their trousseau. The distinguishing feature about this veil is that the rarely beautiful lace is inset, instead of the usual border arrangement.

There is something very interesting to tell about the veil on the bride standing to the left. The veil is made in two sections, so that after the ceremony the bride can remove the lace-bordered long train. If she so desires, without interfering with the youthful capelle portion which so becomingly envelops her shoulders in a mist of tulle. Thus she can move among her guests after the ceremony with perfect freedom. The better shops are showing these two-veils this season.

For the bride who dotes on the unusual, the veil on the standing figure centered to the right should prove an attraction. It is novel because of the high Medici pleated collar which so handsomely defines the neckline.

Designers Now Are Using Plain and Printed Linen
There already has been discussion about the importance of the printed crepe jacket, worn with the monotone crepe dress, and of the printed crepe accent. Repeating this idea, but giving it a fresher appeal, designers are now using printed linen.

The dress in solid color that introduces printed linen as a trimming is also in summery mood, the linen light and bright, the dress in crepe or heavy sheer. These are practical as well as smart fashions, since the linen is washable and the trimmings are usually detachable.

Chicken Foot Weave Used in All Parts of Costume
Of course you are, or ought to be, thoroughly familiar with that material bit of the season called La Pique-Pouille. In all of its variations. This chicken foot weave, be it in wool, silk or what not, works up into costumes for everything from the top coat to the bottom layer of lingerie next to the skin.

JERSEY GOLF FROCK

By CHERRIE NICHOLAS

There is a new Jersey which has all the appearance of being hand-knitted. The very good-looking dress pictured is made of this Jersey, in bright blue. It has been given a very attractive styling. It is adroitly tucked about the hips so as to achieve slenderizing lines. The draw-string neckline is an outstanding touch. The little rope strands form the circle which is fastened with a wooden buckle.

Linen Suits in Vogue
Linen suits are going to have an important place in summer wardrobes this year. You now can buy linen suiting that is uncrushable and it comes in dark, practical colors, including black.

SLEEVELESS COATS, CHIC ENSEMBLES

The coming summer season, as well as this spring, will see the success of ensembles composed of contrasting coats and dresses, whether the latter be in plain fabrics or in prints. However, this new type of ensemble will be entirely different from the combination which has been so much in evidence this last season, and which usually consisted of a plain coat lined with print and matching the dress worn beneath. The new coat will not only be in a contrasting material and color from the dress but will be treated as an entirely separate item.

Paton has short pearl gray coats worn over raven-blue dresses. Jenny has a vivid green and carrot-red coat, which she places over black rayon lacquered satin dresses.

Sleeveless coats are sponsored by leading dressmakers to give more importance to the full contrasting sleeves of the dress.

Washington Daybook

By MERRITT PLUMMER

WASHINGTON—Physical casualties in the present congress thus far have been comparatively light when it is considered that a terrific grid of senators and representatives were subjected to during the three-month session just closed.

Three senators were forced to place themselves under the care of physicians suffering from ailments directly or indirectly traceable to the rigorous special session. They were George of Georgia, Lewis of Illinois and Borah of Idaho.

House members also have felt the effects. The changes in the membership of the seventy-third congress since the election of November 8 last year have been few. And in each instance they have been just individual stories. No particular party issue or plan was seriously affected.

The Shifting Lineup

Two of the four changes in the senate were due to resignations. Cordell Hull of Tennessee gave up his seat to become dean of the Roosevelt cabinet; with the portfolio of secretary of state. Claude A. Swanson of Virginia resigned to become secretary of the navy.

Senators Walsh of Montana and Howell of Nebraska deaths, two of the five house deaths, two—Kemp of Louisiana and Almon of Alabama—occurred since the session closed. In addition to the membership changes thus wrought, Jack Garner of Texas resigned to assume the vice presidency and Lewis Douglas of Arizona quit to become director of the budget.

The present congress, despite the fact that the special session was one of the most difficult of any held in recent years, has a long while yet to run. The regular session of the seventy-third is not scheduled until January 1.

The last congress—the seventy-second—saw 33 changes in membership from election time to final adjournment. Twenty-nine of these changes were caused by death.

Keeping Tab

These congressional casualties are always a matter of concern on Capitol Hill. The house employs its own physician to keep tab on the health of the members. He is a navy doctor and is constantly experimenting to better conditions under which the congressmen work.

Last session he appealed to the speaker of the house to make things a bit easier for his charges. He warned that the pace was man-killing and should be slowed down.

In the senate one of its own members—Copeland of New York—is the self-appointed guardian of his colleagues' health. "Doc" Copeland is constantly urging his colleagues to take care of themselves. He complains because no sunlight can reach the senate chamber.

Local Men in Camp In Wyoming Wilds

2224 Co. F. C. C. C.
Evansville, Wyoming.

Dear Editor:

As a personal favor to the boys from Kingston and surrounding towns now in the Civilian Conservation Corps of the U. S. A., please put the following in print:

The boys of the Civilian Conservation Corps wish to announce through their local paper that they are having a good time. We are in a little place called Elk's Fork. It is fifty-three miles from Evansville, Wyoming. Parents and friends should not worry about the boys as they are all in good health and are having a good time. We have a good doctor here to take care of the boys, so you see there is nothing to worry about. The grub is good as far as it goes and Captain Brine said any time the boys wanted chicken to let him know, but so far the boys have been kind of bashful. I think you have all heard of Libby McNeil & Libby, the great canned beef manufacturers. Well, I think Marie Sam owns a share in the company because we are all setting chickens of it. It isn't bad but as for myself I prefer chicken.

We also have a lot of sports, such as baseball, volleyball, basketball, golf, swimming and swimming. We also have a good sport called snake hunting. Harold McNeil and Al Shand took twenty-four of the boys out early morning. They went through the swamps and over mountains. They didn't see any more four things the first morning. Consequently they had to stop. One of the horses got into the mud and the other day and three fellows couldn't get him out. The horse got mad and kicked the boys. But himself. Now he runs around with the butters. All busted in his shirt. Railroad Volmek is going to work at the Hotel in Evansville, Wyoming, on July 4. He is going under the name of Rough House Ned. He thinks he is good but time will tell. He had the boys running around through the hills looking for a cabaret. After they ran around through the hills for hours they gave it up as a bad job.

A few of the boys went on a hike and stayed away all night and they found an old still, not bad but of course I mean it was running. They killed a porcupine and now they think they are big game hunters.

Cue Ball Keating and Fowles Larkin hand out the supplies and the clothes that they hand out will be Tom Tom. He only weighs seven hundred pounds and he is seven feet four. The wild and woolly west has nothing on this camp. A bunch of the boys went off to the edge of the camp and built a fire. When the fire was going good they started the Indian war cry. A brave lad from Brookline got his knee hit with a knife and then crawled under the bed. We all sleep in tents and we have lots of mosquitoes to keep us company. Captain Brine and Lieut. McNeil, our officers in charge, are both good slaves and they sure can make a joke. Taking it all in all, this is quite an outfit.

Talks to Parents

Father To The Rescue

By ALICE JUDSON PEALE

Since his baby brother was born, Roger has changed from a gay, good-natured child to a sullen and ill-tempered one.

The change has been met with a new severity from both parents. Vaguely, they realize that the difficulty is connected with the baby's advent and they feel that they must cure him of what they see as a "jealous disposition."

Every child is, of course, naturally jealous of a new baby. The treatment accorded him at the time the baby is born has a great deal to do with the ease or difficulty with which he adjusts his own changed position in the family group.

The mother at this time is out of the picture, being away in the hospital. During the following months, she is very much preoccupied with the baby's physical care, and, naturally, most concerned with the child who obviously needs her most.

If it happens that the father is the sort of person who is also peculiarly drawn towards the youngest and most helpless member of his family, the older child will surely feel himself cruelly abandoned and alone.

This unhappiness frequently is reflected as disobedience, destructiveness and a generally negative attitude toward the parents' wishes. The advent of a new baby causes a situation in which the father plays a very important role for the older child.

Added love and attention from him at this time make this child feel more secure and offer him a compensation for his loss of attention from mother.

This alone will do much toward carrying him through an emotional difficulty which may otherwise leave permanent scars upon his personality.

SWIMMING CLASSES AT Y. M. CONTINUING

The second session of the beginners' class was held at the Y. M. C. A. Thursday afternoon. Most of the boys enrolled are making rapid progress. Harry Flowers was passed to the swimmers' group the first day after having completed the 50 feet swim. Yesterday, Donald Van Deusen swam the same distance and was passed to the swimmers' group.

Fifty feet is the required distance. The boys who have passed swim the length of the "Y" pool which is 60 feet. The start is made at the deep end which is about six and one half feet deep. They swim over the deepest part which is about seven feet deep and then to the end of the pool where the water is a little over three feet deep. This method gives the boys confidence in deep water.

The beginners' class meets each Monday and Thursday at 2:30 o'clock. All boys who are members of the Boys' Department of the "Y" and cannot swim are urged to get into this class.

A number of adults have enrolled for individual instruction. A special six lesson course has been arranged. Any normal individual should learn to swim by taking this course and practicing the methods taught. One young man who started the course yesterday and knew nothing about swimming at the beginning of the lesson swam 15 feet at the close of it.

'ENGLAND'S INNS ARE CHARMING

Old Hostels Scattered All Over the Country.

VISITORS to England this year will find that the old English inn still has no sign of being out of fashion. A distinctly "going out" of this fact may be seen in the fact that the old English inn is still a favorite place for the tourist. It is a place where the traveler can find a comfortable and cozy atmosphere, and where he can enjoy the hospitality of the innkeeper. The inn is a place where the traveler can find a comfortable and cozy atmosphere, and where he can enjoy the hospitality of the innkeeper. The inn is a place where the traveler can find a comfortable and cozy atmosphere, and where he can enjoy the hospitality of the innkeeper.

The inn is a place where the traveler can find a comfortable and cozy atmosphere, and where he can enjoy the hospitality of the innkeeper. The inn is a place where the traveler can find a comfortable and cozy atmosphere, and where he can enjoy the hospitality of the innkeeper.

Most of the Swans and Mermaids, the Mitres, White Harts, and Crowns, are not concealed in remote places, far off the beaten lines of travel, so that they have to be made the objects of special visits to be seen. No particularly keen sight is required to discover them.

Plenty of Inns Everywhere. Besides all the old inns you cannot help discovering on the main roads and in the towns, there are those others, of course, on lonely heaths or fronting peaceful village greens. There are likewise modest "ordinaries" by the banks of the little rivers where the disciples of Isaac Walton love to lodge. And there are inns at bridge ends or where roads meet, to say nothing of seaside inns whose windows look out to sea or command busy harbor views.

In short, there are plenty of them of all kinds to offer an admirable field for the collector. And a more fascinating holiday hobby than collecting old inns it would be hard to imagine. Time and again at an inn you will chance upon a bit of history or romance and find the local associations with some famous personage proudly treasured by the country folk. Think, for instance, of dropping into Dick Turpin's birthplace, the Rose and Crown, in the Essex hamlet of Hampstead! Think of drinking a toast on the spot to the memory of that doughty knight of the road! His father was the Hampstead publican of that day, and the people thereabout all knew Dick's story and can point out to you his cockpit, now marked by a ring of trees, just across the way.

Whether you purposely make a pilgrimage to old inns, or whether you casually seek their shelter, bear in mind that they are neither Ritz-Carltons nor Biltmore. Put aside for a little while your accustomed notions of twentieth century luxury and splendor. Be willing to take things as you find them. For a day or two, forget about the regiment of uniformed pages you generally see in modern establishments—the hall porters, the bedside telephones, and all the array of patent electric gadgets that can be switched on and off at will.

Pass Up the Luxuries. All or some of these adjuncts you may be surprised to meet with in more than one old inn where you would least expect to find them; but if you find none of them, it will do you no harm to walk upstairs instead of being taken up in a lift, or to go to bed by the light of a candle instead of by the glare of 32-candle power electric bulbs. What you are always certain to find in all of these old ordinaries will be comfort of a really homely, substantial kind, scrupulous cleanliness, genuine courtesy, from mine host down to "boots," and unfeigned hospitality whose character none could mistake.

Not least in adding its share to your enjoyment will be that charming atmosphere that pervades well-kept houses of this type. If you are at all of an artistic turn, you will detect in the inn the only thing you can call it. It is an artistic, subtle thing that well-kept houses attempt at once to achieve; it is not exactly an art or a series of objects; rather it is a feeling, a feeling that is not easily expressed in words. It is a feeling that is not easily expressed in words. It is a feeling that is not easily expressed in words.

What may, perhaps, surprise you is the unassuming excellence of the appointments quite commonly encountered. Again and again you will find furniture that would bring a high price in antique shops. The landlady would account the very idea of selling any of it; every piece is regarded as a treasured possession of the inn. It is always pleasant to eat at a fine old mahogany table or to sit on a superb Hepplewhite or Sheraton chair, and to know that all the succession of guests share that same pleasure.

Good Pictures and Silver. You will find good pictures on the walls—Ruskins, Morris, and a variety of prints that collectors eagerly covet. You will find good silver on the table and good knives that will really cut.

In some places you will have your ale in silver cans, and in the dining room of the Globe, at King's Lynn, there is a great cupboard full of old silver belonging to the house. Once this silver was regularly used on the tables. Now the cupboard is carefully locked and guests may feast their eyes on the treasures through the glass doors, but must content themselves with eating from plate of more recent date. And the story of the locking is a sad comment on the predatory covetousness of some visitors.

Aside from all the antique plentifulness of ordinary occurrence, you will find some quaint survival to remind you of long bygone usages. For one thing, as like as not you will see in the hall of an old coaching inn a glazed show case, set in mahogany framework, hanging on the wall. This was meant to hold a display of cold meats, game pies, cheese, and pastries for the inspection of passengers on the fast-mail coaches, who stopped for a hasty meal while the horses were being changed and the driver refreshed with food and a rehearsal of the latest local gossip. At a glance, they could see the choice of fare awaiting them, give their orders while directing themselves of their coats and wraps, and find their food ready on the table in the dining room the instant they set down. The quick luncheon counter of today could have rendered no more expeditious service.

The ancient appointments, the eticeras, and the various little elegancies of other days are all intimately bound up with the history of the inns. They form part of the visible record of social life for centuries past, and many a quaint reminder there is of manners and customs that are now but memories. But, more than that, the very air of the old hostels is vibrant with mellowed associations. On crossing their thresholds you catch a pervading sense of genial human intercourse through many generations.

Literary Shrines.

Should you chance to visit Saffron Walden and put up at the Rose and Crown, you will be reminded that, almost beyond doubt, Shakespeare stayed there when he visited the town with his company of players in 1607. Though the inn was refronted with brick in 1690 and "new sashed and beautified in the year 1748," and has undergone sundry other alterations in the course of the centuries, much of the original Tudor work remains as it was when Shakespeare knew it.

The Rose and Crown is by way of being a literary shrine on another count, too. Himself a poet and the associate of literary men, young William Holgate, the son of the Rose and Crown's landlord, seems on credible evidence to have been the mysterious "Mr. W. H." to whom Shakespeare dedicated his Sonnets.

Time and again you will find yourself dining and sleeping at the same inn where some famous historical personage has stayed; perhaps the very same room may fall to your lot. In the George at Buckden, Huntingdonshire, for example, you may be given the room where Queen Victoria slept as a girl, when her carriage having broken down on the road, she had to spend the night at this hostelry. The inn people will probably ask you to be careful not to disarrange anything in this sacred room, for they pride themselves on keeping the room exactly as it was when its royal occupant slept in the mahogany four-poster.

It is somewhat more stimulating to the imagination to sit in the taproom of the White Horse at Eaton Socon and picture Dick Turpin coming in and calling for a pot of ale or a hot toddy. But both the George at Buckden and the White Horse at Eaton Socon are rich in picturesque appeal and quite capable of holding the visitor's interest without the added lure of historical associations.

Amid entertainments no less alluring and highly varied, you can keep company at Portsmouth with Lord Nelson and the Duke of Wellington; at Cranham with Richard III; at Guildford with Samuel Pepys; at Chigwell with Queen Elizabeth; and at Broadway, if you like the contrast, when the extreme meet in the same inn, with both King Charles the Martyr and Oliver Cromwell.

Works of Pagan Writers

Consigned to the flames
During the Reformation in England and during the decade of the Commonwealth, Catholic books in England were destroyed with a vigor that virtually amounted to annihilation. Their records also were burned. In those good old days there were frequently funeral pyres of martyrs and of books. A little later, when a book was regarded as offensive from a political or religious angle, although the two were one often then not, the common hangman was told off to gather all copies and consume them in flames.

That we today have copies of any of the ancient classics of Greece or Rome is due to the local or sporadic character of the onslaughts upon pagan literature in those dark ages when the group in power made swift work of the literature of the minorities. The Christians in their zeal burned whole libraries because they contained the works of pagan writers. An example of this zealotry is found in the circumstance that Pope Gregory VII is said to have ordered that the contents of the Palatine Apollo library, whose treasures had been formed by successive emperors, be sent to the flames, that thereby more attention would be given to sacred literature.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Tibet

Tibet lies like some strange accretion at the base of the great brain of China. It is inhabited by a race which holds its descent from a primordial monkey and a she-devil. Cut off from the world, visited during the 1300 years of its known history by a handful of Portuguese, Austrian and Belgian traders, Jesuit missionaries and Capuchin friars, Tibet has dedicated itself to brooding and to meditation. Invaded from time to time by the warlords of Mongolia, the armed hosts of China, the savage Gurkhas of Nepal, the Dogra mountaineers of Kashmir and, last, at the turn of the Twentieth century, by Sir Francis Younghusband at the head of a British military party seeking treaty rights, Tibet appears to have remained as indifferent as coldly aloof from the "inferior" civilizations of the western world as though her people inhabited the planet alone.—Detroit News.

Napoleon's Superstitions

Napoleon's pet superstition was never to start a battle or sign a treaty on Friday. He recalls a column in the Philadelphia Record. He set forth from St. Cloud for Russia on Friday, March 29 was a date that figured largely in his life. He was brought to Paris on that date, took at Nice the command of the Italian army, made his last will, returned from the Isle of Elba, etc. The letter "M" was also considered prophetic by him. Mortier was his best general, Moreau betrayed him. Milan was the first capital he entered as conqueror. Napoleon died in May. Murat abandoned him. His first chamberlain was Montequieu. Mait was his best-known adviser and he spent his last days in France at Malmaison.

President's Pardoning Power

The President cannot delegate his pardoning power to any other official of the government, but he relies upon the advice of the attorney general, who has a special attorney in charge of pardons to assist him.

Financial and Commercial

New York, June 30 (AP).—Financial markets generally maintained an attitude of cautious contemplation today in the face of currency stabilization uncertainty.

While there was some profit-taking in securities and commodities, the speculative fraternity apparently was highly confused over the international monetary situation. Grains were inclined to rally after dipping earlier, but cotton moved indifferently. The stock trading volume was considerably under that of yesterday. A few specialty shares attracted attention, but most pivotal issues held to a narrow range. The dollar shuffled around its Thursday's closing levels in foreign exchange centers.

The alcohol share group and its allied members jumped about rather erratically. Ralls and mining equities were steady to firm. Delaware & Hudson got up 4. Homestake Mining started 9. Canada Dry Glycerin ran up 4, and Union Pacific, Lehman Corp., American Rolling Mills, Deere, Celanese, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, National Distillers, Crown Cork and American Telephone recorded gains of around 1 to 2 points. The tobacco work rather heavy.

While the stabilization problem continued to hold the center of the Wall Street limelight, both traders and investors were cheered by the week-end trade reviews which reported that the upswing in business apparently is continuing with unabated fervor. The nationwide buying wave, it was said, has gathered such force that an actual shortage of goods is now threatened, with orders in excess of production capacity.

In this respect, it is recalled that during the long, lean depression years most large factories trimmed producing capacities to minimums and some even dismantled portions of plants. Now, with the buying revival, it is difficult in many cases to get back to anywhere near the former producing volume.

WEST SHOKAN

West Shokan, June 30.—Sultry weather is much in evidence but the threatening showers have failed to materialize and each succeeding day gets drier and drier. Never seen the like of it so early, so say the old timers.

Dry as the weather is, springs failing, crops withering, and pastures singed brown, hay makers are right in their element, those at least who are in a position to lay other jobs aside. At Broadhead Jordan Brothers have made heavy inroads with their harvest always an extensive one. Chase and Elwyn Davis, West Shokan Heights upland farmers, have the situation well in hand having stored 25 fat loads to date and all in excellent condition.

A large group of the Camp Olive boys at Boiceville hiked it over to the dance Saturday night at Colosseum Hall. The new comers were chaperoned by an army sergeant and his loving crowd was out for a good time. Three big bands were given a bit back to camp by the kind Judge Davis and his troops.

Corneilia Davis, Olive's school spelling champion, succeeded in winning second honors at the county elimination meet held Monday afternoon in Kingston High School.

Due to illness of Corporation Counsel Fitzgerald the Ashokan Reservoir tax rate hearing was necessarily postponed.

Joe Winkler and Clayton Christensen, representing the town of Olive, have joined the ranks of the conservation army in Breinville.

Donald Bishop made a business trip to Kingston Wednesday morning and later in the day left for Hobart for a few days' stay with his uncle and aunt, Judge and Mrs. A. Lind.

Stewart Harold Constable is engaged to assist John Jordan with his haying upon completing his first harvesting engagement.

Inspector Arthur Turner, in company with Henry J. Traver, manager of the Kyserville creamery, visited producers along the north 1000 route Wednesday.

Bernard Dwyer, well known local writer and artist, was a social caller at Broadhead one evening recently.

It is reported that the Harman family of New York city, who rented Mrs. Minnie Smith's Main street residence last summer, are desirous of locating here again this season.

Joe Winkler has been employed of late by Raymond Kramer at his Moonshaw property.

Indications point to a large visitation of city folks over the week-end.

Clayton Burgher is another farmer who is getting along well with his haying.

Filmora Bell, veteran Watson Hollow road gardener, reports his growing crops hard hit by the drought. The new comers were chaperoned by an army sergeant and his loving crowd was out for a good time. Three big bands were given a bit back to camp by the kind Judge Davis and his troops.

Hughes Eliminates Sutter at Wimbledon

Wimbledon, Eng., June 30 (P).—George Patrick Hughes, fourth ranking English player, today removed Cliff Sutter, third ranking American star, from the Wimbledon tennis championships with a surprising straight set victory, 9-7, 7-5 and 6-3.

The victory of Hughes was clean-cut and well deserved. Gaining in confidence as the match progressed he effectively held control of the game through the last two sets.

Sutter did not seem up to his usual standard of play but that might have been due to the Englishman's continuous attack. Hughes is a fighter and once he felt he had Sutter on the run he never relaxed the pressure.

Queen Mary made her first appearance at Wimbledon this year. She watched the matches with keen interest.

Pope Agains Leaves Vatican

Rome, June 30 (P).—Holy Year pilgrims numbering many thousands renewed their homage today to the most illustrious of their number, Pope Pius XI. as the pontiff emerged from the Vatican and attended a brilliant high Mass at the Basilica of St. Paul-Outside-the-Walls. Among them was Bishop Walsh of Maryland. It was the third appearance of Pius in famous cathedrals of Rome following his avowed intention of visiting their basilicas during the Holy Year to obtain eventual plenary indulgence.

First Permanent Teeth

The four six-year molars are the first permanent teeth to come in. They come in immediately behind the temporary teeth when the child is about six years old. Since they displace no teeth, they are often mistaken for temporary teeth.

"Credulity"

"Credulity," said H. H. the sage of Chinatown, "should be tempered by skepticism. To believe all doctors and to believe some of them prove equally fatal."

Panl Joyce, who pitched for the Saugerties team last year, and who was responsible for the defeat the Pan Ams received at Saugerties hands, is now with the Pan Ams. The village squad has "Ted" Fraleigh doing the pitching now.

CARNERA WILL VISIT HIS PARENTS IN ITALY NEXT WEEK.

Pompton Lakes, N. J., June 30 (P).—Primo Carnera, still in an hilarious mood over his newly won heavyweight laurels, drove a party of friends to his training camp site today for breakfast.

The new champion was in a happy frame of mind as he emptied a pitcher of orangeade and sat down to an expensive meal.

He said he planned to leave for Italy some time next week to visit his parents and beyond that his plans were uncertain. He will return to New York later in the day.

Principal pairings in men's singles sent Stofen against the clerical Briton, H. G. N. Lee; Jiro Satoh, Japanese hope, against Giorgio De Stefani of Italy, and G. Liffleton Rogers, tall Irish star, against Rodrich Menzel, of Czechoslovakia.

New Find In Old Fort Shows How Doctor Battled Plague

New York. P.—A reminder of a once prevalent belief concerning the spread of yellow fever has been discovered in old Fort Jefferson on Dry Tortugas in the Florida Keys.

It is found in one of the ancient gun ports where Dr. Samuel Mudd, a prisoner of 10 years ago, had enlarged so that the wind could carry the yellow fever out.

Mrs. Henry Howard, president of the American Merchant Marine Library Association, which distributes free reading material to American seamen and lighthouse keepers, reports the find in an account of an inspection trip to lighthouses of the Florida reefs in connection with her library association work.

Dr. Mudd's System Effective.
Dr. Mudd had noticed, Mrs. Howard explains, that the yellow fever which swept the prison tortoise apparently was carried from bed to bed in the direction of the wind, and whether he was mistaken or not the records show that he was remarkably successful in treating the disease during his imprisonment.

The fort's decaying walls are still surmounted, Mrs. Howard writes, by the original Dry Tortugas lighthouse. The present Dry Tortugas lighthouse is three miles away on Loggerhead Key, southernmost of all the beacons on the Florida reefs.

"The horrors of the life of the prisoners who were sent there to Fort Jefferson, and indeed the sad fate of all during the terrible yellow fever scourge, are vividly told," writes Mrs. Howard, "in the life of the late Dr. Samuel Mudd, who was imprisoned there for nearly five years although wholly innocent."

Failed To Recognize Plague.

"It may be remembered that the night following the assassination of President Lincoln, a strange man with a broken leg came to Dr. Mudd's door in the early morning hours and knocked. Dr. Mudd set the leg and, as the stranger was suffering much, he gave him a bed where he remained until the following afternoon when his companion, who had come with him, secured a carriage and took him away."

"The patient proved to be Wilkes Booth and Dr. Mudd, because of his humane act, was accused of being an accomplice, was made a prisoner and sent to Dry Tortugas. . . . He proved a great hero during the yellow fever epidemic and was remarkably successful in treating the disease."

Mad Dog

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

People began coming out of the cars. They had been jolted by the sudden stop the train had made and they wanted to see what had happened. When some of them saw the two bears they hurried back into the train.

"I'm glad you think so," said another. "This train will be late and I had some business to attend to and some things to buy at the store."

The bears began to growl the news about the washed-away tracks and that frightened more of the people. Top Notch began to crow, but no one could understand animal talk, and then Rip thought his barking would help.

"The dog is probably mad," someone said, and at once the others began shouting. "Mad dog! Mad dog! Mad dog!"

"If only Willy Nilly could be here," was the thought each animal had. They had flagged the train and saved these people from a wreck and now they were thought dangerous and mad. But Rip felt he had to tug at the engineer's coat so he would follow and see what had happened. Then someone cried:

"He's going to bite you. Look out! See how strangely he's acting."

"Here," said another, "we'll get sticks and drive them away. Has anyone got a gun on this train?"

Poor Jolly Bear, poor Honey Bear, poor Rip, poor Top Notch! They had saved the people at the risk of their own lives and had just escaped being run over by the train. Now this terrible ending would be their reward!

Tomorrow—Wait, wait, wait!

THROW THOSE SPOOLS AWAY?

FIRST SEE WHAT BABY SAYS

Empty spoons should never be thrown away in a house where there are small children. The creeping baby enjoys rolling them on the floor and chasing after them. Strung together on a stout string, he likes to handle them and bang them against hard surfaces. The four or five-year-old will find them just the thing to use for smokestacks and chimneys.

THE FABLE OF BEING A TRUE SPORT

BY GEORGE ADE

© 1933 Syndicate—WAC Service

ONCE there was a very small and unassuming Ernie who discovered before he had been to the Planet many moons, that no individual attracts favorable attention unless he exhibits a certain amount of daring. Ernie found out, as all kids of Normal Intelligence must find out, that his Elders laid down for him a strict Set of Rules which they took great pleasure in bending to his advantage.

As soon as he could sit on a hard adult knee he was warned that, during the Years to come, he must be Polite, Unselfish, Industrious, and economical. A lot of the Folks who slipped him this rare Dope were ill-mannered and crabbed and lazy and wasteful, but what of it? Among Parents and Relatives the Big Idea to be worked off on the Youngsters is, "Do as I say and not as I do."

Many a Crotch-Eater had told him that when he grew up he must abstain Liquor. The Poker-Players explained to him that Good Little Boys played Marbles for Fun, and not for Glasses and Apples. Uncle Fred, with both of his Vest Pockets stuffed full of high-grade Connecticut-warped Fire Centers and smelling like a Smoke House, would warn the little Man that he must never, never form the Tobacco Habit.

No wonder Griswold, when he was 6 years of Age, sat down one Day and figured it out. In a Spirit of utter Cynicism, that Life was a Bunk and Old People were whitewashed Sepulchers and conventional Virtue offered absolutely no Inducements to a Lad of Parts and Ambition.

Even at that Early Age he felt stirring within Himself an outlaw Desire to be a True Sport. He took note of the Fact that all of the Juvenile Paragons who were held up as Models of Deportment to the Orner Youngsters were pale and had sea shell Bars and wore Shoes in the Summer Time and didn't seem to be getting anything out of Life and were loathed by the Rising Generation.

Early Vices of a Semi-Criminal. On the other Hand, all of the Hard Eggs who could fight with their fists and went swimming in the Creek before the Ice was out and carried Nigger-Shooters and had a standing Feud with the Town Marshall—they were talked about and admired and quoted and surrounded by cringing Courtiers.

Griswold was groping toward a Fact which has long puzzled and discouraged a good many Moralists.

Robin Hood remains a glorified figure, but who is interested in John Bunyan? Captain Kidd has an enduring Fame and is beloved by Thousands who never heard of the Archbishop of Canterbury. Rollo goes into the Discard but Buck Finn remains a luminous Hero whose shocking Vices endear him to Old and Young.

The trouble with straight-laced Morality, as practiced in a perfunctory manner in so many Communities, is that it holds out no glittering Inducements. Griswold, or "Griz," as he was addressed by his Colleagues, knew, even at the Age of Eight, that he never would be respected as a coming Buffalo Bull or John L. Sullivan merely because he washed behind the Ears and saved up his Pennies for the Heavens. It was understood among the Lads of his Gang that the Good Ones were going to escape burning in Hot Flames but, aside from that, they had no Prospects.

It seemed to Griswold that if he wanted to be a cowboy or travel with a Circus, he had better demonstrate an immediate spirit of Bravado by learning to Smoke. When he made this manly Resolve it was still possible to get Pittsburgh Stogies at two for Five, while a very good quality of Cheroot could be had out of a paper Box, at any Grocery Store for Three Cents each, two for Five, or twelve for Two Bits, so that the foul Nicotine was, as you might say, within the Reach of All.

If he finally could puff at a Twofor without getting dizzy, it was because he showed the Optimism and Dogged Determination that are demanded of any one who would learn to eat Olives, play Bridge, reduce the Weight, listen to an Opus or read Hindoo Poetry.

By the time he was in his Teens he owned a Pipe and painfully tried to use the kind of Language that would have horrified his Sunday School Teacher, and he had a semi-criminal Record on account of playing Hooker, smashing Windows and stealing Watermelons.

The Sporting Code of Honor. When a Boy who is brought up in a Refined Home and surrounded by all of the Civilized Influences, shows a wide Streak of Wickedness, some Persons say that he is proving the Doctrine of Original Sin and others say that he is reverting to the aboriginal type and the Neighbors say that his Parents have neglected his bringing-up.

But Griswold and all of the other Juvenile Apaches know that they are trying, with all of their boyish Strength, to live up to the Teachings of that Powerful but Secret Fraternity of which every restless Kid is a loyal Member. They are trying to be True Sports because they know there is an Unwritten Law to the Effect that the No Goods will be ostracized, scoffed at and branded as Molluscoids.

Why did Griswold, a little later, put his foot on the Red and try his damndest to Drink a Glass of Lager without making a Face? Because he had learned that he had to burn through the swinging Doors and goad on the Bar in order to acquire real Standing as One of the Boys. He didn't have any more Craving for Beer than had the other thousands of damnable Heroes who tried to consume it before it was driven across the River to Windsor. It took like Spiced Rata Water with a Pickle in it. As for Red Snuff, the first Sniff of that was like swallowing a Kerensko Torch.

Even after he had acquired the Standard Vices, it became evident to Griz that he would not be regarded as a True Sport unless he could hang up a Performance such as one of the Following:

1. Sit in the same Chair for 14 Hours playing Draw and then appear unconcerned after being nipped for a Month's Salary.

2. Go to the Race Track and listen to a text and plaster all the Currency on a Crippled Goat that comes in just before they are starting the next race.

3. Slip out at Night and attend a Wild Party at which great Sums of Money are devoted to the Purchase of Partridges and Champagne for Ladies connected with the Theatrical Profession who were brought up on Soda Biscuits and Young Hyson Tea.

4. Feed the Rent Money to a Roulette Wheel.

5. Bet in a Loud Voice on every Election Result.

6. Never, under any circumstances, express a willingness to terminate a Party and go Home.

Giving Credit Where It's Due. It is no easy matter for a Man who is trying to get a Football in the Business World to perform all of the blithering idiocies involved in the foregoing tasks.

The Point is that when it comes to being a real, sure-enough hot Sport the Rules of Common Sense do not apply. There are certain Traditions and Precedents which must be observed. One must know how to part with a large Hunk of Money and never bat an Eye. If the Money really belongs to the Creditors, that makes no difference. Usually it does.

Well, Griswold kept on being a True Sport until he nearly ruined his Health, so now he is living out in the Country and letting somebody else buy Diamond Sunburners for the Wives of Bootleggers.

Some people think he is a Has-Been, but he got quite a Thrill the other Day when he tried to make a 200-Yard Shot, over Water, with a Niblick. He was Rotten and the Divot went almost as far as the Ball, but he was very much pleased to hear a Spectator say: "Well, you've got to give the Old Bird credit for One Thing. He's got his Nerve with him. He's a Sport."

Which is true. Probably they will put it on the Head-Stone that he was a Real One up to the Time that his Stomach, and Nerves and Pocket-Book gave out.

Aged Cows Give Up and Appear to Prefer Death

As old age overtakes some cows they get tired of living and just lie down to die—no doubt reasoning that life isn't worth the effort it takes. These fits of despondency invariably occur in winter when range life is at its toughest. When a cow decides to die, writes a correspondent in the Kansas City Times, nothing can stop her. After you have worried and strained "tailing" her up, she'll turn around and make a run at you, then fall down again as much as to say, "Go on away and let me die in peace." I have even had them, when down, refuse hay that I'd packed to them on horseback.

I have found other younger cows, in worse shape physically, that seemed to appreciate it when you got down and helped them get on their feet so they could pick a little something to eat and carry on. A cow heavy with calf is usually willing to do almost anything to survive, but an old cow that is barren seems to lose heart and want to die.

If you still think cows are dumb, just go out and live with them for a few years, as I have, and see how many things they know that you hadn't thought of yourself.

Permanence Bazaar

A beazer is any of various concretions found chiefly in the alimentary organs of certain ruminants, and sometimes man. Formerly these concretions were supposed to have remarkable medical properties, especially as antidotes to poison. A peraimon beazer is one of these stomach balls, something like a hair ball from the stomach of a butchered cow, resulting from eating peraimons. Some of the skin, pulp and seed are not digested and form into a peraimon beazer, or stomach ball, which may necessitate an operation to remove it.

Rapid Change of Sex

The oyster possibly holds the record for a rapid change of sex. The "native," for instance, may turn from male to female and back again as many as four times within 13 months. The Portuguese and American oysters, strangely enough, know no such change, remaining male or female throughout life.

Hour-Glass Spider

The hour-glass spider is of ordinary size. Its abdomen is globoid and its general color a shiny black. Under the abdomen is a curious red marking, resembling a small hour-glass in shape. Sometimes several red dots appear on the abdomen.

THE FABLE OF BEING A TRUE SPORT

BY GEORGE ADE

ONCE there was a very small and unassuming Ernie who discovered before he had been to the Planet many moons, that no individual attracts favorable attention unless he exhibits a certain amount of daring. Ernie found out, as all kids of Normal Intelligence must find out, that his Elders laid down for him a strict Set of Rules which they took great pleasure in bending to his advantage.

As soon as he could sit on a hard adult knee he was warned that, during the Years to come, he must be Polite, Unselfish, Industrious, and economical. A lot of the Folks who slipped him this rare Dope were ill-mannered and crabbed and lazy and wasteful, but what of it? Among Parents and Relatives the Big Idea to be worked off on the Youngsters is, "Do as I say and not as I do."

Many a Crotch-Eater had told him that when he grew up he must abstain Liquor. The Poker-Players explained to him that Good Little Boys played Marbles for Fun, and not for Glasses and Apples. Uncle Fred, with both of his Vest Pockets stuffed full of high-grade Connecticut-warped Fire Centers and smelling like a Smoke House, would warn the little Man that he must never, never form the Tobacco Habit.

No wonder Griswold, when he was 6 years of Age, sat down one Day and figured it out. In a Spirit of utter Cynicism, that Life was a Bunk and Old People were whitewashed Sepulchers and conventional Virtue offered absolutely no Inducements to a Lad of Parts and Ambition.

Even at that Early Age he felt stirring within Himself an outlaw Desire to be a True Sport. He took note of the Fact that all of the Juvenile Paragons who were held up as Models of Deportment to the Orner Youngsters were pale and had sea shell Bars and wore Shoes in the Summer Time and didn't seem to be getting anything out of Life and were loathed by the Rising Generation.

Early Vices of a Semi-Criminal. On the other Hand, all of the Hard Eggs who could fight with their fists and went swimming in the Creek before the Ice was out and carried Nigger-Shooters and had a standing Feud with the Town Marshall—they were talked about and admired and quoted and surrounded by cringing Courtiers.

Griswold was groping toward a Fact which has long puzzled and discouraged a good many Moralists.

Robin Hood remains a glorified figure, but who is interested in John Bunyan? Captain Kidd has an enduring Fame and is beloved by Thousands who never heard of the Archbishop of Canterbury. Rollo goes into the Discard but Buck Finn remains a luminous Hero whose shocking Vices endear him to Old and Young.

The trouble with straight-laced Morality, as practiced in a perfunctory manner in so many Communities, is that it holds out no glittering Inducements. Griswold, or "Griz," as he was addressed by his Colleagues, knew, even at the Age of Eight, that he never would be respected as a coming Buffalo Bull or John L. Sullivan merely because he washed behind the Ears and saved up his Pennies for the Heavens. It was understood among the Lads of his Gang that the Good Ones were going to escape burning in Hot Flames but, aside from that, they had no Prospects.

It seemed to Griswold that if he wanted to be a cowboy or travel with a Circus, he had better demonstrate an immediate spirit of Bravado by learning to Smoke. When he made this manly Resolve it was still possible to get Pittsburgh Stogies at two for Five, while a very good quality of Cheroot could be had out of a paper Box, at any Grocery Store for Three Cents each, two for Five, or twelve for Two Bits, so that the foul Nicotine was, as you might say, within the Reach of All.

If he finally could puff at a Twofor without getting dizzy, it was because he showed the Optimism and Dogged Determination that are demanded of any one who would learn to eat Olives, play Bridge, reduce the Weight, listen to an Opus or read Hindoo Poetry.

By the time he was in his Teens he owned a Pipe and painfully tried to use the kind of Language that would have horrified his Sunday School Teacher, and he had a semi-criminal Record on account of playing Hooker, smashing Windows and stealing Watermelons.

The Sporting Code of Honor. When a Boy who is brought up in a Refined Home and surrounded by all of the Civilized Influences, shows a wide Streak of Wickedness, some Persons say that he is proving the Doctrine of Original Sin and others say that he is reverting to the aboriginal type and the Neighbors say that his Parents have neglected his bringing-up.

But Griswold and all of the other Juvenile Apaches know that they are trying, with all of their boyish Strength, to live up to the Teachings of that Powerful but Secret Fraternity of which every restless Kid is a loyal Member. They are trying to be True Sports because they know there is an Unwritten Law to the Effect that the No Goods will be ostracized, scoffed at and branded as Molluscoids.

Why did Griswold, a little later, put his foot on the Red and try his damndest to Drink a Glass of Lager without making a Face? Because he had learned that he had to burn through the swinging Doors and goad on the Bar in order to acquire real Standing as One of the Boys. He didn't have any more Craving for Beer than had the other thousands of damnable Heroes who tried to consume it before it was driven across the River to Windsor. It took like Spiced Rata Water with a Pickle in it. As for Red Snuff, the first Sniff of that was like swallowing a Kerensko Torch.

Even after he had acquired the Standard Vices, it became evident to Griz that he would not be regarded as a True Sport unless he could hang up a Performance such as one of the Following:

1. Sit in the same Chair for 14 Hours playing Draw and then appear unconcerned after being nipped for a Month's Salary.

2. Go to the Race Track and listen to a text and plaster all the Currency on a Crippled Goat that comes in just before they are starting the next race.

3. Slip out at Night and attend a Wild Party at which great Sums of Money are devoted to the Purchase of Partridges and Champagne for Ladies connected with the Theatrical Profession who were brought up on Soda Biscuits and Young Hyson Tea.

4. Feed the Rent Money to a Roulette Wheel.

5. Bet in a Loud Voice on every Election Result.

6. Never, under any circumstances, express a willingness to terminate a Party and go Home.

Giving Credit Where It's Due. It is no easy matter for a Man who is trying to get a Football in the Business World to perform all of the blithering idiocies involved in the foregoing tasks.

The Point is that when it comes to being a real, sure-enough hot Sport the Rules of Common Sense do not apply. There are certain Traditions and Precedents which must be observed. One must know how to part with a large Hunk of Money and never bat an Eye. If the Money really belongs to the Creditors, that makes no difference. Usually it does.

Well, Griswold kept on being a True Sport until he nearly ruined his Health, so now he is living out in the Country and letting somebody else buy Diamond Sunburners for the Wives of Bootleggers.

Some people think he is a Has-Been, but he got quite a Thrill the other Day when he tried to make a 200-Yard Shot, over Water, with a Niblick. He was Rotten and the Divot went almost as far as the Ball, but he was very much pleased to hear a Spectator say: "Well, you've got to give the Old Bird credit for One Thing. He's got his Nerve with him. He's a Sport."

Which is true. Probably they will put it on the Head-Stone that he was a Real One up to the Time that his Stomach, and Nerves and Pocket-Book gave out.
